What is Collagen and Why Do We Need It?

- Most abundant protein in body
- Major building block in bones, skin, muscles, tendons, and ligaments
- The “glue” that holds the body together
- Collagen must be consumed in diet to support body’s own production

Collagen Types

- Over 20 types of collagen have been identified, but main types in body are:
 - Type I – Most common and found in hair, skin, nails, bones, ligaments, and tendons
 - Type II – Found mainly in cartilage
 - Type III – Found alongside type I and in blood vessels and internal organs
- All collagen types unique due to amino acid profile and concentration of glycine, proline, and hydroxyproline
